Yes, I spoke with Joe. He said the pallet was not damaged. The broken tiles were not the result of poor handling so chances are that if the tiles were undamaged at time of shipping the remainder are likely undamaged.

Based on the fact that 90 tiles were paid for and not including the 3 damaged tiles, the project potentially has 100 undamaged tiles. I believe that should be fine with the caveat in your response to Wasau that at the time of unpacking if the total number of undamaged tiles dips below 90 that we would expect Wasau to provide and ship the deficit amount at no charge.

Joe-can you verify that the pallet itself doesn't look damaged so the probability of a significant number of other tiles being damaged will be likely be low.

Thanks.

We sent out an extra 13 pieces to you at the time of shipping. You were only charged for 90 pieces (360 sq ft). So the 3 broken pieces we will not replace, you will however have 10 extra pieces to do with any way you see fit. If you have any other questions please contact me.

Trish

The City Yard tell us that they have 6 pallets with 15 pavers and 1 pallet with 13 pavers

We asked the City Yard whether they could check all pallets for other “unseen” damaged pavers.

This is what the City replied:

“It will be difficult to assess the underneath tiles that are bound together on a pallet. By opening up the pallet, we expose other tiles to future damage since the work will not be done for at least a few months yet. It would be unwise to open up the pallet so far in advance of actual construction.”

Given this situation, would you be able to ship additional pavers or another pallet at no charge?

Hello Jasmine and Jose,

Our crews confirmed that the tiles were delivered to our yard yesterday 4/10. However, three tiles were already broken at the time of arrival. Could you pass this information to the vendor before/during the payment process so that we can have replacement for the tiles?

Thanks,
